Manila Rope Range

Manila rope is a natural fibre rope manufactured from the abaca plant grown in the Philippines, and is sometimes also called "Hemp Rope." This rope is strong and durable but as it's made of natural fibre it is more prone to natural decomposition over time than man-made synthetic rope is. Manila rope looks visually very appealing and holds knots well and is often used for landscaping. As over a long time manila rope is 100% biodegradable it's also environmentally friendly.

Quality three strand synthetic hemp rope. Polyhemp rope is a weatherproof rope that will not shrink in length or expand in diameter when wet. As it is made from polypropylene it has the hard wearing qualities and durability of a synthetic rope and does not shrink or bio degrade, whilst retaining that look and feel of a natural hemp rope. These characteristics make it ideal for outdoor use and it is extremely popular for use as a decking railing rope, use in children's play areas and in the garden and general landscaping projects
